Barbara Cavalletti - University of Genova (DIEC)

LAURA is basically a teaching experiment based on a course at the bachelor university level and a set of other complementary activities.

The aim is to improve the teaching of environmental economics and raise awareness of sustainable development among all stakeholders and the general public. In addition, LAURA aims to orient the education of young students towards so-called green jobs at a very early stage and, at the same time, provide useful tools for high school teachers on the latest environmental issues.

The open group activity serves to share the teaching strategy. The experts are asked to validate the proposed activities and monitoring criteria.
